

Drafting Order on Wages

Administration Reportedly Will Speed Junking Of Controls

By Marvin L. Arrowsmith
WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—(P)—Public members of the Wage Stabilization Board conferred with President Truman's economic advisors today as the administration reportedly drafted an order to speed the junking of wage controls.

Chairman W. Willard Wirtz and Vice Chairman Phillips L. Garmann talked with Reconversion Director John R. Steelman and Judge John C. Collet in Steelman's White House office before calling a meeting of the board.

Simultaneously, OPA and the agriculture department "seriously considered" wiping out price ceilings on all food items still under control.

Thus on both the price and wage fronts quick action appeared to be shaping up in line with the swifter decontrol tempo signalled by President Truman when he scrapped all federal restraints on meat.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—(P)—The AFL member of the Wage Stabilization Board today said he will advise the White House that labor never will cooperate with an all-public wage board, being considered to succeed the present three-sided agency.

Walter Nason, the AFL representative and Carl J. Shipley, the CIO member of the board, were called to the White House for a 3 p. m. (CST) conference with Reconversion Director John R. Steelman and Economic Advisor John C. Collet.

Other Developments
These other developments rounded out the picture:

1. Senators studying the implications of Mr. Truman's action on meat foresaw an early end to almost all price controls, except those over rent, either by voluntary government action or by legislation.

2. The Republican party contended that handling of the meat problem by the Democrats is a good reason for a GOP congress.

3. While livestock prices jumped in the wake of decontrol, secretary of agriculture Clinton P. Anderson predicted there will be more meat in butcher shops "in about 10 days." But he said the shortage will last through 1946.

4. The decontrol board, reversed in its ruling which restored meat ceilings, met to take another look at what's happening to uncontrolled prices for dairy products.

5. Government officials told a reporter privately that the United States will lift its quarantine Friday against the importation of Mexican cattle.

Pay Controls Next
Word that the White House may act by week's end to speed removal of wage cures came from a member of the government's reversion advisory board, which conferred yesterday with Mr. Truman on the wage-price situation.

The order reportedly in the works is understood to outline the pattern the government will follow in stripping away pay controls. It probably will clarify, too, the status of the wage stabilization board, whose two industry members already have submitted resignations to Mr. Truman.

Following the reconversion board's session with Mr. Truman, Eben Ayers, a White House press secretary, told reporters the panel had recommended for the second time that all wage and price controls be scrapped "as soon as this is compatible with economic security of the nation."

He Lost and He's Paying Off

"I lost and I'm going to pay off," were the words spoken by Roy "Dutch" Kirchhofer, 915 South Vermont avenue, as he began at one o'clock this afternoon to work five hours at Ivan Berry's Feed Store to pay off the bet he lost to Berry as a result of the Red Sox losing Sunday's game. If Berry had lost he would have had to wash dishes an equal amount of time in Kirchhofer's restaurant, the Pacific Cafe. The coveralls which Kirchhofer is wearing in the picture were loaned to him by Milton J. Hinklein, who borrowed them from the Cardinals. Said Hinklein, "I am very happy to lend them to him under the circumstances." (Staff Photo)

Hallowe'en Celebration October 31

Lions Club Making Plans to Entertain Community Citizens

A downtown celebration, sponsored by the Sedalia Lions club, will be held in Sedalia, Thursday night, October 31, Hallowe'en. There is to be a parade through the business section of the city, apple bobbing contests and awards to those having the best costumes and decorated bicycles.

The Pettis County Post No. 16, American Legion auxiliary is to assist, as are members of the Boy Scouts and the entire recruiting staff of the army recruiting office in Sedalia under command of Major Mercer, who is a member of the Lions.

Various committees, appointed by general chairman Haddock are completing their plans for the "big night." The celebration is expected to be one of the largest held in Sedalia, with all schools in the county invited to participate.

Hallowe'en Contests
Each grade in every school is to have a contestant in the apple bobbing contest. They will be divided into three groups, those in grades 1 to 4 inclusive; 5 to 7 inclusive and 8 to 12 inclusive. Prizes will be awarded to each group.

The parade is to be organized at Ninth street and Ohio avenue, proceed north on Ohio avenue to Main street; west on Main street to Kentucky avenue; south on Kentucky avenue to Fourth street and east on Fourth street to Ohio avenue and Fourth street where it will disband. Contests will follow on the court house lawn.

The Lions will hold their costume party on Friday night, October 25th, in the Ambassador room of the Bothwell hotel, at which time members will dress in costumes appropriate to Hallowe'en. Dancing will be enjoyed.

Guests today were Congressman Marion Bennett, guest of Carl F. Urban and Aaron Haller, guest of Sam Higleyman.

Rush Meat on Hoof to Market

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 16.—(P)—Meat on the hoof poured into the Kansas City stockyards today as farmers and stockmen rushed to take advantage of higher prices.

Early offerings for hogs were topped by $25 a hundred, as compared with $28.50 yesterday, the first under decontrol. Choice cattle were taken at $29.

Receipts included 5,000 hogs, 6,000 sheep and 7,500 cattle, of which 1,800 were beef steers. Loaded trucks jammed some of the district last night and early today. Police called to direct traffic said one line of trucks was 15 blocks long.

At the packing houses it was said that beef roasts would be available within a "day or two" with fresh pork cuts trailing only slightly.

Packing plants began calling production workers back on the job. Each of the four major plants had laid off approximately 1,000 workers. One plant, Cudahy, planned to kill nearly 300 cattle today.

Smaller Men Died More Courageously

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—(P)—Supreme Court Justice Jackson said today Hermann Goering's suicide "killed the myth of Nazi bravery and stoicism and deep conviction."

"The founder of the concentration camps, where death was handed out to millions, could not face the gallows, himself," Jackson said in a statement.

The Justice, who was U. S. chief prosecutor at Nuernberg, stated the "real significance" of the suicide lies in its effect in Germany.

"Goering, the top surviving Nazi leader, was the only defendant on whom a martyr myth might have been founded," Jackson said. "The gallows offered him the most effective platform from which to impress his sympathizers with the depth of his conviction and his selflessness for the cause. Frankly, I feared he would do it. But he lacked the character."

"Even the smaller men who were his satellites died more courageously."

United States Expands Fleet Of Aircraft

Has More Super Bombers Now Than When War Ended

By Elton C. Fay

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—(P)—The United States has more super-size bombers today than when the war ended.

The Army Air Forces, striving to keep its long-range striking arm in readiness even though demobilization has made deep inroads elsewhere, now counts slightly more than 3,000 "very heavy bombardment" type aircraft. This number compares with 2,865 on hand when hostilities ended in August, 1945.

With the exception of two experimental airplanes—the B-36 and the B-35 "flying wing"—all the present force of VHBs are B-29 or B-24 modifications.

AAF officials emphasize, however, that not all the 3,000-plus planes make up the VHB operating force. Only part of the total actually are being flown; the remainder constitute reserve or spare aircraft. Deliveries of B-29 types still are being made to the AAF, although in minor numbers.

While preserving and slowly expanding its fleet of aircraft capable of carrying atomic bombs thousands of miles, the AAF has disposed of nearly 12,000 of its winged workhorses of World War II, the B-17s and B-24s.

At the wartime peak, the air forces had 12,919 "heavy bombers" of these types. Sixteen months later—on last August 31—it had only 961 left.

Except in the relatively few instances where the bombers could not be flown from storage fields and hence were scrapped on the spot for parts, the B-17s and B-24s were declared excess and turned over to the War Assets Administration. WAA sold most of them for scrap.

Those still retained by the AAF are being used for personnel carrying purposes and for experimental work.

B-17s Converted
In the latter category, a few B-17s have been converted to "drone" and drone control airplanes.

When such new types as the B-36 and B-35 and the more distant projected jet-propelled VHBs get into production, the B-29s will move into the obsolescent stage along with the B-17s and B-24s.

Choke Roads With Cattle

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 16.—(P)—Producers, seeing profit possibilities in the removal of ceilings, rushed cattle and hogs to market here early today in such volume that police were called to direct traffic in the livestock district where loaded trucks jammed streets.

Early arriving truckers reported highways leading to Kansas from all directions were choked with trucks loaded with livestock.

Unloading was delayed by a shortage of help at the stockyards, where a gate man estimated that 9,000 to 12,000 cattle and 3,000 hogs had been received before dawn. Policeman Foster Thornhill reported that at one time trucks were lined up for 15 blocks.

A checker at the truck unloading docks reported livestock had been unloaded at the three docks at the rate of one truck about every five minutes since sundown last night, and that the flow had continued throughout the night.

Clyde Rose, Olathe, Kas., trucker who brought in 30 hogs, said stock raisers in his area seemed to be shipping everything that was in condition to leave the farm.

Herschel Winfred, of Sweet Springs, who brought two truck loads of hogs, said:

"I know these prices can't last, and so do the other raisers around Sweet Springs. They are all shipping."

The absent-minded intruder, instead, had left an expensive watch on the table and four silver dollars.

Losing Proposition
LEWISTON, Ida., Oct. 16.—(P)—Mrs. Gena Asker reported that someone had entered her home, but took nothing.

The absent-minded intruder, instead, had left an expensive watch on the table and four silver dollars.

Trucks in the waiting lines were from Missouri, Kansas and Iowa, with a few from Oklahoma.

Goering Cheats Gallows, Takes Poison, Ten Other Nazis Die at End of Rope

Hermann Goering, with Hitler, at crest of Nazi victory tide.

Julius Streicher in favorite pose—abusing minorities.

Joachim von Ribbentrop at No. 10 Downing street London.

Hermann Goering was born on Jan. 12, 1893, in Rosenheim, Bavaria, the son of an army officer. He attended cadets' schools, and learned fly in 1915, was a World War I ace. Joining the Nazi party in 1922, Goering was wounded in the 1923 putsch. When Hitler came to power in 1933, Goering was made head of the secret and political police. As reichminister for air, he secretly developed the Nazi air arm. Occupying many subsequent posts and titles, owning countless decorations, he was placed in complete charge of the defense of Germany by Hitler in June, 1944. At Nuernberg Goering was held to be leading war aggressor, second only to Hitler. He leaves a wife and one child.

Julius Streicher was born on Feb. 12, 1885, in Fleinhausen, Germany, of a schoolmaster father and a peasant mother. After service in World War I, Streicher began a personal campaign against the Jews. In 1921, he founded the Nuernberg branch of the Nazi party. Arrest and imprisonment with other Nazis followed the 1923 "putsch." After his release, he began publication of his violently anti-Semitic magazine, Der Stuermer. Streicher served in the Bavarian diet from 1924 to 1932, when he was elected to the Reichstag. At Nuernberg the court held that he incited the German people to active persecution of the Jews. He was the father of two sons.

Joachim von Ribbentrop was born in 1893 at Wesel on the Rhine, son of an army officer, and educated in Switzerland, England and France. He saw service in World War I. In 1920, he married a champagne heiress. He met Hitler in 1923, became mediator between Hitler and the German government in 1930. And from 1933 von Ribbentrop held high Nazi jobs. From 1936 to 1938, he was ambassador to England; from 1938 to 1945, reichsminister for foreign affairs. At Nuernberg, von Ribbentrop was found to have carried out criminal policies in administration of invading territories, to have furthered extermination of the Jews. Ribbentrop was father of four children.

Heavily Guarded Goering Achieved 'The Impossible'

NUERNBERG, Germany, Oct. 16.—(P)—Maj. Fred Teich, assistant chief security officer at the Nuernberg prison, said today he was convinced Hermann Goering had carried his death potion with him ever since his trial as a war criminal began 11 months ago.

Teich told newsmen every inch of Goering's cell and his possessions had been kept under microscopic search, and the manner of concealing the poison with which he cheated the gallows in the 11th hour remained a mystery.

The major ruled out any possibility that the poison had been slipped to the 53-year-old Nazi leader in recent months. Security measures had been too stringent for that, he said.

By G. K. Hodenfield

NUERNBERG, Oct. 16.—(P)—The mystery surrounding Herman Goering's suicide promised a thrilling sequel today to the crime story climaxed when ten Nazi leaders were hanged.

Goering, once second only to Hitler in the Nazi hierarchy, swallowed potassium cyanide and died in his jail cell here last night less than two hours before he was to hang with the others, condemned October 1 by the international military tribunal.

The puzzle was, how did Goering, guarded day and night for a year and a half, and repeatedly searched, get the poison—and from whom?

Goering's captors took a capsule of potassium cyanide away from him when they first searched him. Since then, his person, his clothing and his cell had been searched at least a hundred times.

In the prison, lights in his cell were kept on and a guard stood outside 24 hours a day. Sleeping Goering was required to face away from the wall and to keep his outside the covers.

Talked Through Screen
On visits from his wife and daughter, he talked to them across a table and through a screen while guards watched on either side.

In the court room a guard stood within three feet of him and he never was permitted to hand anything to his counsel except through the guard.

Col. B. C. Andrus, prison commandant, often said that in the Nuernberg jail, suicide was impossible, but Goering achieved it.

To give an official answer to that question, an anonymous investigating board of three was appointed today—headed by a "disinterested" United States army officer.

Wallace Ill. Cancels Speaking Engagements
WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—(P)—Wallace with a severe cold, Henry A. Wallace today cancelled campaign speaking dates in Michigan and Indiana.

The former commerce secretary still plans to go through with the latter part of his speaking schedule, which includes appearances in California, Washington, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

A friend of Wallace said his doctor had ordered "no traveling or speaking" until at least October 24. That is the date set for a speech in Los Angeles.

Woman Historian Dies
ST. LOUIS, Oct. 16.—(P)—Mrs. Chilton Atkinson, 57, the former Miss Stella M. Drumm, 30 years librarian of the Missouri Historical Society, died last night at Missouri Baptist hospital where she had been following an automobile accident near Meridian, Miss.

Mrs. Atkinson was an authority on western United States history. An autopsy will be performed to determine the cause of death.

23rd Day for Strike
PITTSBURGH, Oct. 16.—(P)—The Pittsburgh power strike entered its 23rd day today with scant hope of settlement after some 1,700 members of the striking independent association of employees of Duquesne Light Co. voted in a national labor relations board election two to one not to change their collective bargaining agency.

Amateur Detectives In
Amateur detectives joined in the hunt for clues. And one, a lawyer, claimed evidence that Goering had poison last July or knew where he could get some.

The lawyer was Dr. Friedrich Bergold, counsel in the war crimes trial for Martin Bormann, who was tried in absentia and sentenced to hang.

Bergold said that after he made his final plea for Bormann last July 22, Goering called him to the prisoner's box and, smirking and rubbing his hands, said:

"Doctor, you were wonderful. I am so glad that you quoted the old German proverb to these people: 'The Nuernbergers hang no one before they really have them.'"

Had a Secret
Goering, said the lawyer, did not doubt that he would be condemned to death. Bergold's conclusion:

"Only a person who had a secret or a surprise in store could have made this remark in such a situation."

Armchair detectives seeking a solution to this international "who done it" before they came to the end had these facts to go on:

Goering's captors took a capsule of potassium cyanide away from him when they first searched him. Since then, his person, his clothing and his cell had been searched at least a hundred times.

In the prison, lights in his cell were kept on and a guard stood outside 24 hours a day. Sleeping Goering was required to face away from the wall and to keep his outside the covers.

Last Words of Nazi Leaders

NUERNBERG, Oct. 16.—(P)—Here are the last words of the Nazi war criminals hanged today.

Joachim von Ribbentrop, Nazi foreign minister: God protect my Germany. My last wish is that Germany realize its entity and that an understanding be reached between the east and the west. I wish peace to the world.

Julius Streicher, Jew-baiting editor: Heil Hitler and now I go to God. Purim feast, 1946. (Purim is a Jewish springtime festival to commemorate the deliverance of Jews from Haman, who was hanged by King Ahasuerus—Xerxes—for his plan to massacre the Jews of Assyria.) The Bolsheviks will hang you one day. I am with God. Adele, my dear wife.

Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, chief of the high command: I call to God Almighty to have mercy on the German people. More than 2,000,000 German people went to their death for the Fatherland before me. I follow now my sons—all for Germany.

Ernest Kaltenbrunner, a gestapo chief: I have loved my German people and my Fatherland with a warm heart. I have done my duty by the laws of my people and I am sorry my people were led this time by men who were not soldiers and that crimes were committed of which I had no knowledge.

Arthur Seyss-Inquart, Austrian traitor: I hope that this execution is the last act of the tragedy of the Second World War and that a lesson will be learned so that peace and understanding will be realized among the nations. I believe in Germany.

Hans Frank, governor general of Poland: I am thankful for the kind treatment I have received during my captivity and I pray God to receive me mercifully.

Wilhelm Frick, protector of Bohemia and Moravia: Long live eternal Germany.

Fritz Sauckel, slave labor boss: I die innocently. The verdict was wrong. God protect Germany and make Germany great again. Let Germany live and God protect my family.

Col. Gen. Alfred Jodl, chief of staff of the army: I salute you, my Germany.

The war assets' administration announced that it has a quarter million dollars worth of cosmetics and toiletries for sale—but only by the case to retailers, distributors and wholesalers.

The supplies had been bought for Wacs, Waves and Lady Marines as well as for post exchanges gift counters.

Streicher, Tormentor Of the Jews Most Defiant of Them All, Yelled 'Heil Hitler'

NUERNBERG, Germany, Oct. 16.—(P)—Herman Goering, who ended his life mysteriously in the agony of poison, and ten other top Nazis who died on a hangman's rope were taken to nameless graves on this bleak, cold morning in final expiation for the colossal crimes of Germany.

Grim and manacled because in some unexplained fashion Goering had been able to escape the ignominy of the gallows, Joachim von Ribbentrop started the death marches and plunged to eternity at 1:14 a. m. (6:14 p. m. Tuesday CST).

Arthur Seyss-Inquart was dead at 2:57 a. m., just an hour and 43 minutes after the once dapper German foreign minister had pulled taught the 13 coils of the noose placed by Master Sgt. John C. Wood of the United States Army.

The other eight climbed the 13 black steps one by one, dying alternately on twin gallows set up to speed the grisly task ordered by the International Military Tribunal of the United States, Russia, Great Britain and France.

Did Not Escape shadow
Goering, even by his death less than two hours before the execution did not escape the shadow of the gallows.

While Seyss-Inquart and Col. Gen. Alfred Jodl still were twirling with the last faint sparks of life, the body of Goering was brought in on a stretcher and placed between the gallows in symbolic execution. The generals representing the Allied Control Council were allowing no legend to spring up that the German who once was outwitted only by Hitler had escaped death.

The blanket was removed and there lay the former Reichsmarschal, clad garishly in soaking wet pajamas of black silk and a blue jacket. Physicians had used water in attempts to revive him. His face was contorted with the pain of his last agony. He had swallowed a vial of cyanide of potassium, which kills swiftly, just as Heinrich Himmler did at the end of the war in which countless millions died, victims of the Nazi system the 11 ring leaders represented.

Mysteries
How Goering got the poison, kept it and took it were mysteries the shrunken fat man perhaps took to his grave.

In death, he had robbed his ten fellows of another 10 minutes of life, for it took about that time for each to expire and Goering was to have been the first.

The other ten died stolidly, plunging into an enclosed trap that took their death pangs for the eight newspaper correspondents and 30 other witnesses. None collapsed. All but Alfred Rosenberg made brief statements, the main theme of which were "Long live Germany." Most endeavored to show bravery.

Julius Streicher, the bald tormenter of the Jews, screamed a spine-tingling "Heil Hitler" as he started up the 13 stairs to doom. His can as he fell at the end of the rope was heard in the execution chamber where American troops played basketball a week before. He was perhaps the most defiant of all and the only one to mention the name of the German chancellor believed to have died with his capital, Berlin.

"Gollow My Sons"
Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel was the Prussian soldier to the last. He said "I follow my sons," who died in the German army. Ribbentrop, arrogant but slightly dazed, cried out for "an understanding" between the east and west and a desire for "peace to the world."

Ernst Kaltenbrunner's dueling scars shone red on his face. Hans Frank asked "God to accept me in mercy." Wilhelm Frick stumbled up the steps. Ape-like Fritz Sauckel died bravely. Jodl said "I salute you, my Germany." Seyss-Inquart said he hoped "peace and understanding will be realized among the nations."

Defeat Doubly Bitter for Boston Players

First Red Sox To Lose After Winning Pennant

By Jack Hand
ST. LOUIS, Oct. 16.—(AP)—The Gas House Gang spirit still lives in the World Champion St. Louis Cardinals who have stolen the 1946 series from the favored Boston Red Sox on the sheer "hustle" of Enos Slaughter.

The score was tied at 3-3 in the eighth inning of yesterday's decisive seventh game and the full pressure of baseball's 16th million dollar series was riding heavy on every pitch when Harry Walker lined a base hit into left center. "Eno," who had singled to open the inning, catapulted off first base, rounded second and headed for third while Leon Culberson retrieved the ball and made a quick relay to Shortstop Johnny Pesky.

Making the full sweep at third while Coach Mike onalez flapped the come-on sign like an excited mother hen, Slaughter lit out for the plate.

Pesky Too Late
Pesky, apparently not expecting that sort of daring base running, had dropped his arm half way, watching Walker run toward second, before he realized Slaughter was not footing home with the tie-breaking run. His peg to Roy Partee was too late as Slaughter topped off his magnificent heads-up running with a fine slide that scored a run worth $3,757.04 to each Cardinal share holder.

Harry Brecheen, making a relief appearance when Murry Dickson weakened, clung grimly to the 4-3 margin through a threatening ninth to become a three-game winner. Not since 1920 when Stanley Coveleskie whipped Brooklyn three times to give Cleveland the title, had any hurler picked up three victories in a single series.

Oddly enough a two-run double by Dom Dimaggio that almost lost the game, actually gave Brecheen his chance to get into the record books.

Dickson, like Brecheen a pint-sized workman, had handcuffed the Bostons for six innings after giving up a run in the first on singles by Wally Moses and Johnny Pesky followed by Dimaggio's run-scoring fly to Slaughter. After Bobby Doerr led off the second with a scratch single, Dickson did not allow a base hit until the eighth when two pinch hitters drove him from the box.

Russell to Third
Rip Russell, hitting for Catcher Hal Wagner, started it with a single and moved to third when George Metkovich, batting for relief pitcher Joe Dobson, doubled.

Although Manager Eddie Dyer knew Brecheen was weary from a full nine inning victory Sunday, he had faith in the little left hander to subdue this sudden threat. After striking out Wally Moses and taking Pesky on a fly Brecheen yielded the tying runs on Dimaggio's two-bagger.

Gone was the two-run edge that Dyer had been coddling since his Cardinals knocked Dave Ferriss out of the box in a two run fifth inning. Instead, the score was knotted with a man on second and the "mighty" Ted Williams at bat. Brecheen dug in and forced the kid to loft a high pop to Red Schoendienst.

Brecheen Takes Over
After Slaughter's brilliant base running on top of Walker's double Brecheen once more had the series in his hip pocket, but this most thrilling of any closing game in several years was not over yet.

Successive singles by Rudy York and the troublesome Doerr created a delicate ninth inning situation. But Pinky Higgins forced Doerr at second, Roy Partee popped to Stan Musial and the game ended when Pinch Hitter Tom McBride bounced to Schoendienst for a series clinching force of Higgins at second base.

The pitching mound was the scene of a jubilant Cardinal celebration as his mates lifted Brecheen on their shoulders. It was a great moment, too, in Cardinal history, the fourth straight time they had won out in a seven game series and their sixth triumph in all.

For Boston, defeat was doubly bitter because of the knowledge they were the first Red Sox club ever to lose a world series after they had made a show of the rest of the American league in coasting to a pennant by a 12-game margin. Boston also had been made 7-20 series favorites by the odds makers.

In a sense it was a personal triumph for Dyer, the soft-spoken Texan who was lured back to baseball from the oil business by his wife's insistence that "You have had all the other jobs in the organization. Now if you turn the big one down they'll say you were afraid to tackle it."

The 36,143 last day sellout at Sportsman's Park boosted the series over the million mark at $1,052,920 not counting the $175,000 for radio rights which ordinarily is split up among the players. It is being held in escrow to be used in the proposed player pension fund.

Because the Sox split their shares 41 ways and also because they lost, each check will come to only $2,052.03. Both winning and losing shares are the smallest since 1918 when the series was held in early September because of the First World War.

In the first inning, Dom Dimaggio's long fly to Enos Slaughter drove in the Red Sox first run, and the Cardinal's right fielder, forced to throw hard for the first time since he suffered that bruised elbow, wrung his right hand in pain after he cut loose.

All-out Battle In Big Six This Weekend

Oklahoma Meets First Conference Foe This Saturday

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 16.—(AP)—Big Six coaches sent their charges through hard scrimmage as they prepared for week-end games that will pitch them into an all-out battle for the conference football championship.

Saturday will be the first day for all six teams to engage in conference play. Kansas State played—and lost—two Big Six contests; Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska each won their first games while Iowa State lost its opener. Oklahoma will meet its first conference foe for the week.

Columbia, Lawrence and Norman will be the scenes of the Big Six frays.

Iowa State will move into Columbia for the Tigers' home opener. The Iowans are working on an aerial offense with Don Ferguson doing a lot of the tossing, but they took time off from rough practice to express pleasure over President Truman's meat decontrol order. They were getting ready to eat a hind quarter of horse meat this week, but college authorities said they would be able to furnish the gridders with beef.

Missouri found cause for smiles, too, over the return to play of Loyd Brinkman, starting right halfback injured in Saturday's Kansas State game, and Bob Hopkins, starting left halfback, who missed that contest because of a pulled muscle.

At Lawrence, Coach George Sauer prepared for the invasion of the Nebraska Cornhuskers on the University of Kansas homecoming day.

The Cornhuskers paused for a promotion day while Coach Bernie Masterson moved halfback Harvey Stroud and Fullback Wally Hopp from the "B" squad to first string assignments.

Coach Hobbs Adams at Manhattan was also thinking in terms of promotion as he made ready for what looks like a Saturday suicide invasion of Oklahoma. Adams sat up and took notice when Wendell Pollock, former all-Kansas prep star from Wichita gave a sparkling ball-lugging performance to bid for the starting left half berth on the Kansas State eleven.

Coach Jim Tatum took little notice of the fact that the Sooner eleven was favored to soundly thrash the visiting Wildcats, and he sent the Oklahomaans through the usual tough scrimmage.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By Hugh Fullerton, Jr.
NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—(AP)—What sort of a fall season is this when hockey, supposedly a winter sport, opens the day the world series ends? . . . Anyway, the series is over and (to borrow H. Phillips' line) the long suffering sportswriters who stuck with the Cards and Redsocks for seven games, ten days and several thousand miles, now can look dull, feel dull and be dull. . . . One player who lost money on the series is Stan Musial, who was offered $7,500 for a month's tour with Bob Feller's All-Stars. Stan will join the outfit, but he'll only get about $3,000 to add to his series cut. . . . Eddie Dyer, Cardinals manager, almost quit baseball when Knute Rockne offered him a freshman football coaching post at Notre Dame. And a decade later he almost went into football again as part owner of a club in the pro league Chick Meahan tried to organize.

Sports Before Your Eyes
Reports from the midwest say that Bill Barclay, golf coach and assistant basketball tutor at Michigan, is going east to coach the Harvard cagers. Also that Lou Boudreau may become the next Illinois basketball coach if Bill Veck drops him as Indiana's manager. . . . Saturday's Navy-North Carolina game may turn out to be a running duel between 165 pound Charley (Choo Choo) Justice and 170 pound Pistol Pete Williams. . . . Jack Dempsey will do a guest refereeing job for free in Danbury, Conn., Friday for Promoter Pete Montesi, a double amateur of World War 2. . . . Joe Goldin, Oklahoma U. right half-back, has outtraded all three of the Sooner's opponents, gaining 239 net yards to a total of 156 for Army, Texas A&M and Texas. . . . Alex Rison, Springfield Indians' center, is tabbed as the only mountain climber in hockey. . . . How come, when the club owners are always making them out of molehills?

Protective measures to assure an uninterrupted warmup for Murray Dickson, who said he had been bothered by photographers in Boston, failed to avert the shaky start for which the Cardinals' slender right-hander has become noted. Ushers fringed the dugout and area in which Dickson loosed his arm.

Before the game a well-wisher told Ted Williams that "I hope you get hot out there." The slugger's reply with a wry smile was: "Now that would really be something for me to do in a world series game wouldn't it?" but his modest sarcasm was in order. The Cardinals kept him tamed again and when it counted.

In the pre-game warmup period, generous Cardinal outfielders tossed souvenir baseballs to the spectators.

The paving stones on the porch at Mount Vernon were imported from England by George Washington.

Brecheen Leads Cards to Series' Victory

New Records Are Made in World Series

Harry 'The Cat' Set Southpaw Pitching Record

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 16.—(AP)—Harry (The Cat) Brecheen's season record of 15 won and as many lost was strictly on the mediocre side but the St. Louis Cardinals' clutch-pitching southpaw today held a world series record that probably never will be surpassed.

In coming through triumphantly with his courageous relief hurling job against the Boston Red Sox in the seventh game of the classic yesterday, the hungry-looking pitcher from Oklahoma became the first left-hander in baseball's annals to record three world series victories and the ninth hurler to accomplish the feat in the blue ribbon series.

The slim Cardinal with the ice in his veins was the first pitcher to turn in the hat trick since Stanley Coveleskie cooled off the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1920 with a trio of mound masterpieces.

Other chucking craftsmen to rack up three in one series were Christy Mathewson, with three shutouts in 1905; Jack Coombs; Urban Facer; Babe Adams; Joe Wood; Charles (Deacon) Phillippe and Bill Dinneen.

While the series' pitching was excellent on the whole, one important batting standard was bettered, thanks to the Cardinals' stick spire in the fourth game. In that contest the Redbirds collected 20 hits to tie the figure established

Graham Uses Diamond Neck Twist To Win

Eliminates Sirois By Causing Muscle Spasms In Neck

Roy "Cowboy" Graham, did it again. He used the diamond neck twist, and stimulated muscle spasms in the neck of Walter Sirois, Montreal, Canada, and eliminated him in the feature event Tuesday night. The Pettis County Post No. 16, American Legion, wrestling committee now wants Orville Brown, claimant to the heavyweight title, for Graham next week.

Gus Karras, matchmaker said Brown has agreed to come next Tuesday and is ready for the Texas to try his new hold on him "if he can get it".

Sirois won the first fall using the Kangaroo flip in seven minutes and 10 seconds. Graham used the neck hold on Sirois and won the second in 1½ minutes and 30 seconds. Sirois was not permitted to return for the third fall period.

In the semi-windup event Wally Dusek, Omaha, Neb., and Marshall Esteppe, Sturgeon, Mo., went the 45-minute limit. Dusek won the first in 18 minutes 52 seconds with a body slam, while Esteppe took the second in 12 minutes and 55 seconds using a series of drop kicks and flying tackles. The bell ended the third fall period.

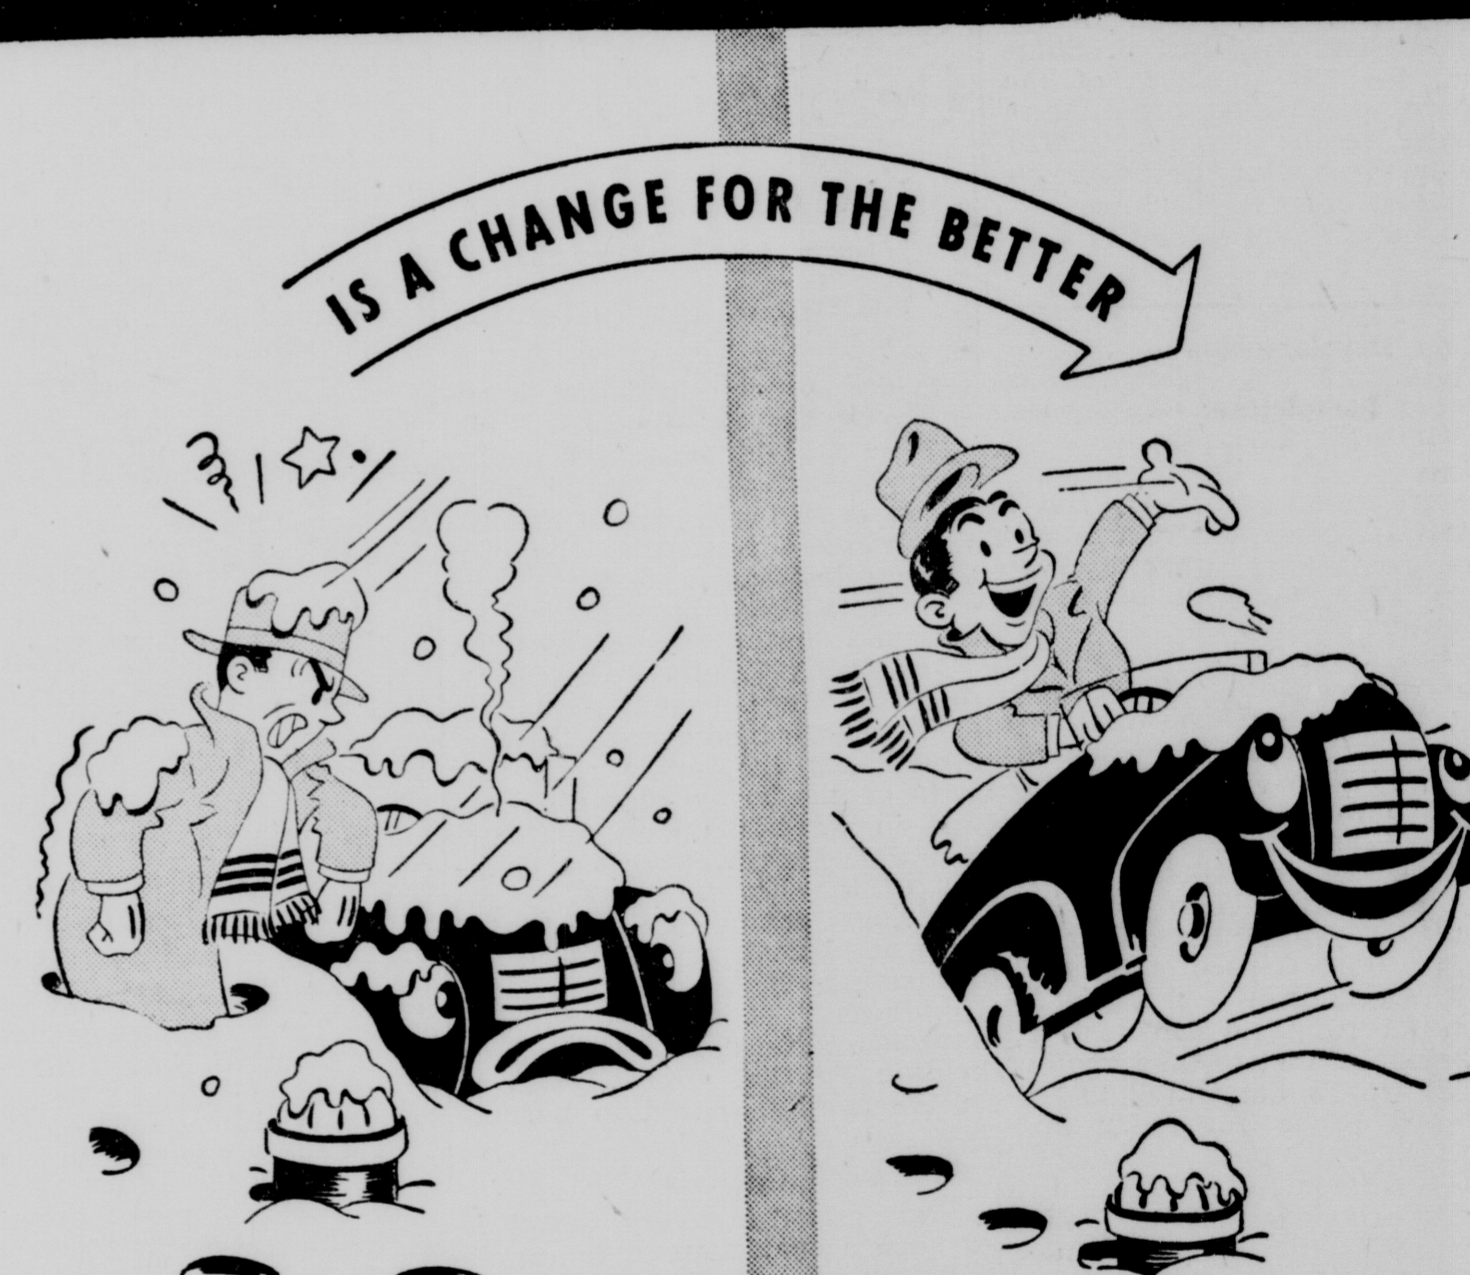

Harry Finkelstein, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Boston, beat Tony Felice, Rome, Italy, in nine minutes and 42 seconds, of their special event match. Finkelstein used the arm pull and body press to win.

Stan Musial, the stellar Cardinal first baseman whose series hitting was far below his regular season performance that topped the National League, was scheduled to leave by air tonight for the west coast to join fireball Bob Feller's touring all-stars.

Molotov Sails On Britain's Gem of the Sea

Soviet Statesman Has Beautiful Suite On Luxury Liner

By Hal Boyle
ABOARD THE QUEEN ELIZABETH, Oct. 16.—(P)—Soviet foreign minister V. M. Molotov boarded Britain's $24,000,000 gem of the sea, the 83,673-ton Queen Elizabeth, two hours before sailing time at Southampton today and went straight to his stately luxury suite.

In a hasty corridor interview, the smiling Soviet statesman said he was "happy to be aboard this great ship."

Despite the death of Sir Percy Bates, chairman of the Cunard White Star line, which operates the ship, all flags were kept at full staff for the sailing.

"I think Sir Percy would want it that way," explained Commodore Sir James Bisset, the Elizabeth's commander.

Molotov, his deputy, Andrei Vishinsky, Ukrainian foreign minister Dmitri Manuilsky and his interpreter stepped aboard at 11:15 a. m. and joined notables in the long delayed maiden voyage of the liner as a commercial vessel.

"Do you go to America with good hopes?" Molotov was asked.

"As always," he replied.

rateful to Britain

He said he was grateful to Britain for making the cruiser Dido available for his trip from France to Southampton but explained he took a Russian army plane instead because he had to work late in Paris last night.

"I hope our action will not be misunderstood," he said, "because we are very grateful indeed to the British government for their readiness to put a ship of the royal navy at our disposal."

Molotov said that after the United Nations meeting in New York he hoped to "complete the unfinished work" of the Paris peace conference, which ended its deliberations yesterday. (Secretary of State Byrnes is flying home.)

Heavy Guard

The Soviet diplomat and his party drove from the airport to the dock in nine limousines, flanked by three more cars full of special guards. Scotland Yard operatives and uniformed policemen guarded the docks.

Plenty Meat But Cattle Held Back

By James Marlow
WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—(P)—Here's an ABC on the meat shortage, the worst mix-up of 1946.

There's no real meat shortage. There's plenty of cattle, but the cattle were held back from slaughter until price controls were ended. This holding back of cattle was made clear by the beef industry's OPA advisory committee, a committee set up to deal with the government.

Her wartime earnings reputedly have put her already in the financial black—and $50,000,000 was spent to refurbish her.

Unusual Chapter in History is Written

By J. M. Roberts, Jr.
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

If America's gangsters had moved on Washington in the '20s, taken over the government and then raised their sights to cover the whole world, their story would hardly have been more incredible than the chapter in history written by the men who died today in Nuremberg.

For all the mad doctors of fiction who practice fiendish experiments on helpless patients, for all of the despots of history who made death the only arbiter of their disputes, for all the superstition-crazed who have sought to propitiate their gods with human sacrifices, for all the crimes into which men have been led by their avarice, these men of Nazidom provided a match.

When Robert Ingersoll stood before the tomb of Napoleon he thought of all the widows and orphans he had made, of the tears that had been shed for his glory. These Nazis who this morning swung on the Nuremberg gibbet and Hermann Goering, who poisoned himself, conspired with a man who they hoped would be a new and greater Napoleon, but who flopped even as a Genghis Khan. They elicited plenty of tears, but no glory. They were at the end what they were at the beginning — gallows-bait. Even Goering, a suicide, wound up on a stretcher beneath the gallows on which his colleagues died.

Legal purists probably will argue for years over whether these men should have been hanged. There are those who say, citing legal precedents which they consider solid, that these men were convicted of acts which were not illegal when committed, that you must create your law before it can be broken. They will admit that aggression by Germany was a violation of international law by the state, but say that the state is not the sum total of the individuals chosen to administer it—that the state is a corporation embodying the aspirations of millions of stockholders and that no international law had made its managers personally responsible.

Others uphold the Nuremberg verdicts as conforming to the growth of all law. They say that in certain circumstances the community itself has the right to decide when aggravated acts have reached the point of criminality, when an example must be made, and a precedent established.

Equity Settlement

There is a field of Anglo-Saxon law known as "equity" covering litigation over situations that are not themselves covered by law. In this field courts decide the disputes on the basis of generally accepted standards of right and wrong.

The international court at Nuremberg, in effect, applied the rules of equity. The result makes the Nazi leaders valuable for the first time—as warning to future rulers that the world has hardened its heart against aggressors.

U.S. Must Stay At the Top

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 16.—(P)—Maj. Gen. H. S. Aurnand, director of research and development in the war department's general staff, said today the United States "must stay ahead" of other nations whose scientists and engineers "are making a supreme effort" to keep the military potential of their countries at the top.

There are two problems posed to engineers at the moment, the general said in an address prepared for the fall meeting of the American Society of Civil Engineers, which opened a three-day convention here today.

The first of these, he said, "is to make the military application of the basic scientific information discovered during World War II to our national security; and the second of these is to arrange that, in the event of a future emergency, scientific information can be given military application in a very much shorter time."

Stock Market Up, Then Back

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—(P)—The stock market moved up smartly at the opening today, but then slowly settled back into a narrow irregular range.

Advances—except for a few special cases—never got much beyond a point. Declines were equally narrow. Turnover of about 1,600,000 shares was well below the fast turnover which accompanied yesterday's rapid advance.

'Britain Can Make It' But British Wish They Could Keep It At Home. Too!

The King and Queen of England study one of the 6,000 exhibits in a "Britain Can Make It" exhibition in London. Like the suitcase they're looking at, products displayed for the export trade only.

Editor's Note: The following dispatch was written by the Foreign Director of Acme Newspictures, Inc., who has just spent several months in Europe.

By Robert P. Dorman
Written for NEA Service

LONDON (NEA)—Britain is showing its manufactured wares in exhibitions and show windows these days. The exhibits must always bear two placards, one big, the other little.

The big card carries the slogan "Britain can make it." The little card reads "For export only." The other day a chinaware manufacturer set out a beautiful set of dishes behind a plate glass window with the two cards. Next morning he found the wreckage of the window and most of the dishes in the showcase. There was a brick buried in the fragments. It was wrapped in a piece of paper on which someone had scrawled: "Britain can break it."

Life in England today still is based on the austerity program inaugurated during the war. Food, even bread, is rationed. Clothing is the "utility" type developed during the war. New consumer goods are practically non-existent and Englishmen still are trying to make do with what they had before the war started. Voluntary power "rationing" has been urged.

Yet England's production of consumer goods is rising monthly. It's all for export, and this is beginning to gall Englishmen at home.

The window smashing episode was only one bit of evidence of this growing discontent. In two months in England I saw many other signs.

Many of the English with whom I talked are beginning to wonder if all their hard work is worth while. Squeezed by high taxes and high prices, unable to buy any of the good things in life with the little money they have left at the end of the month, many are wondering if working at all is worth while.

In England's coal fields, vital to the whole economy, this discontent has taken the form of absenteeism running as high as 25 per cent. Coal production is lagging far behind needs. A forecasted deficit of 5,000,000 tons of coal this year may throw 1,000,000 workers out of a job.

England's housing problem is far worse even than that in the United States, and to stimulate building it was necessary to authorize bonus payments to bricklayers for laying above a certain quota each day.

Yet with all its shortages, England so far hasn't been troubled by a bad black market situation. Food rationing is fair, although there is little to eat and I doubt that any Englishman today gets up from a meal with that full, satisfied feeling so dear to Americans. Restaurant meals average about a third less than those in the United States. In two months in England I lost 14 pounds.

Under the rationing system, an English housewife selects the store with which she wishes to trade and is certified with the rationing board as a customer of that shop. She does all her food shopping in that one store thereafter. The ration board sees that her shop and all similar shops get a fair proportion of the food available. She in turn gets the same share as every other customer. All food is sold at ceiling prices.

Housing is more difficult. Many landlords are converting (with very little actual conversion) five and six room houses into apartments for two and even three families and getting the same rental for each they formerly got for the entire house. Eviction rules are much more lax than in the United States and calendars of courts handling rent ceiling violations are jammed.

Hotel rates are almost double what they were during the war itself, and after weeks of searching I was able to locate a one-room apartment, rent $25.20 a week. Restaurant meals cost about $2 on the average.

So far, the discontent with the export program and the continued shortages at home have caused little serious trouble for the labor government which has won all its bi-election tests, although sometimes with less of a majority than formerly. But the labor government may yet be forced to compromise its policy and delegate at least some of its production to its people who have done without so long.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

How to Handle a Fortune

Some months ago I reported in the Clarion how Mel Bate's uncle died up north, and left him with a tidy fortune.

Naturally, our town was curious to see how Mel would spend it: Traveling around the world... getting a new house or car... wearing fancy clothes... or dining on cold pheasant and champagne...?

We can now report, Mel hasn't changed a bit! Drop in on him any night, and you'll find him in his shirt sleeves by the fire, chatting with the Missus, sharing a mellow glass of beer with friends.

From where I sit, Mel has learned the art of handling money—as well as handling people. You don't let cash-in-the-bank push you around any more than you let people push you around. If you like the simple, homey life; companionship and quiet ways; a glass of beer and friendly talk—that's worth a fortune, after all!

TEMPLE STEPHENS CO.

Cold Shoulder on the Black Market

It's the same all over the U. S. these days, just as it was in Cincinnati, where the camera went to market for the pictures above. Mrs. Margaret Goldschmitt (left) registers triumph as she reaches for a package of meat at the end of a half-block line. Mrs. Lulu Schmitt (right) registers gloom; she waited in the same line three hours, but when she got there, the ice box was bare.

NEW YORK (NEA)—Even the black marketeers are complaining about the meat situation. Illegal, even—is coming from. Well, all beef's too high for them, they say.

But in the picture of meatless woe, the customers of a Brooklyn butcher shop and the employees of a Long Island steel company are satisfied that they know where their next pot roast—or beefsteak, even—is coming from. Well, all beef's too high for them, they say.

The Brooklyn shop has been finding 100,000 pounds of steaks and roasts for its 10,000 hungry customers each week. Don't call up and ask them to save you a rib. They're not answering the phone.

The steel company workers are riding herd on their own cattle out on Flushing Meadow, fattening up the steers for what you might call internal distribution. They're not answering the phone, either. They're too busy fighting an OPA beef that says if the steel company cattle go to a slaughter house, it must be made available to the public.

In both cases, the beef came from the western ranges and never saw the inside of a packing house. A syndicate composed of business men, lawyers and accountants—there's not a butcher among them—supplies the Brooklyn meat market. They decided that all they had to do was get their customers and the steers in the same place at the same time and they would have a big business. They sent their buyers roaming through the w. , buying all they could get at a fair price. The cattle then were shipped to a farm in Iowa for fattening. After that, independent small slaughter houses did the butchering, and the meat went directly to retail outlets, by-passing wholesalers.

The syndicate found it could make money even at ceiling prices. Customers drive from hundreds of miles around to reach the syndicate's retail outlet in Chester, N. Y., a filling station converted into a meat market. It takes 60 butchers and a special detail of police to handle the crowds at its Brooklyn market.

Thomas F. Kearns, president of that Flushing steel company, had about the same kind of an idea. Only he didn't want to go into the meat business; he just wanted to keep his meat-hungry employees happy.

Near San Antonio, Texas, he spotted a likely looking herd of steers, bought 38 head (including one bull, he learned later) and shipped the lot back to Flushing.

Kearns' amateur cow hands, all plant employees, built a corral eight feet high to protect their precious herd, and now are joyfully watching the critters fatten into luscious steaks. In about two weeks, the first of the steers will be led to slaughter.

In the meantime, Kearns will continue to oppose the OPA's firm contention that when you lead a steer to slaughter, you've got to lead the steers to market.

As for those black marketeers, they say a little of the beef that was stuck away in warehouses when the OPA was off is beginning to trickle back into the under-the-counter and over-the-ceiling shops. But they complain, at the illegal wholesale prices they can't do business.

The Daily Washington Merry-go-Round

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16—It was news which would help his boss not publicized, but at the last session of congress, the big western cattlemen now withholding meat from the public also forced the American taxpayer to continue footing a large part of the bill for feeding the western cattle which he cannot now eat.

About 145,000,000 acres of public land in the western states are open to ranchers under the U. S. grazing service. Ranchers are permitted to turn their herds loose on the public lands for nearly the entire year at a cost of only five cents per head per month for cattle and one cent per head per month for sheep.

The grazing service, with a force of only 400 men and a budget of a little over $1,000,000, has done a valiant job of fighting erosion, keeping water available for vegetation and seeing to it that the land is in good condition for grazing.

Total yearly rentals amount to about $850,000, with half going to the states in lieu of taxes, and one quarter to improvements on the land. Thus, the taxpayer has to pay the remaining four-fifths of the cost of keeping the range in shape for the big cattlemen.

To offset this deficit, grazing service officials have been trying to raise the rental. Private and state lands, they point out, rent at from three to eight times as much. The American people, they argue, should be permitted at least to break even on their public lands.

At this point, Senator "Heigh-Ho Silver" McCarran of Nevada came riding to the rescue. McCarran, a member of the senate's public lands committee as well as of the powerful appropriations committee, always sides with the big cattlemen and silver miners. So he rigged up an investigation trip through the west, and issued a report disapproving any increase in the grazing fees.

Meanwhile, the grazing service got pinched from the opposite direction. Congressman Jed Johnson of Oklahoma—where the grazing service has few lands—decided that the service should be put on a self-sustaining basis. Unless the fees were raised, he held, the grazing service budget would be curtailed.

This now has happened. Coming on top of the meat strike, this may be just the thing to convince the grazing service that now is the time to increase grazing fees despite the threats of Senator McCarran. Already they have discussed the matter with Secretary of the Interior Krug, who feels that, since cattlemen are keeping their stock on the range instead of sending it to market, they should at least pay a reasonable price for the privilege of using the public lands for a sit-down strike.

From the Diplomatic Pouch
Secretary of State Byrnes called Secretary of War Bob Patterson on the trans-Atlantic phone to arrange for the army to fly 268 delegates from Europe to the United Nations general assembly in New York. . . . Acting Secretary of State Acheson will make a very important speech at the Al Smith dinner today, warning the diplomats of the world that unless they heed the wishes of the people of the world for peace, the people of the world will pick new diplomats who will ensure the peace of the world. . . . President Truman's speech before the general assembly of the United Nations will be a masterpiece of Statesmanship, and will urge the whole world to back the United Nations. . . . While the United States is pulling British chestnuts out of the fire throughout the world, Great Britain is busy opposing equal rights for American Airlines in foreign countries.

Harry Truman's Press
If Harry Truman could place an ad in the papers, probably it would read something like this: "Wanted—Good press secretary; willing to work long hours; must be practicing newspaperman, not afraid to say 'No.' Low salary, but private car and plenty of prestige. Call National 1414 or write H. S. T., 1600 Pennsylvania avenue, Washington, D. C."

There are few weaker spots in the White House staff than Truman's press aides. . . . Charlie Ross, the president's secretary, simply isn't filling the bill. Personally one of the finest gentlemen in Washington, Ross is by nature an introvert, doesn't get around much, is a poor spot-news reporter and a complete failure as a press agent.

Newsman who cover the White House sometimes are genuinely alarmed at Ross' ineptitude. They claim he doesn't read the newspapers regularly, doesn't even keep up with the White House directives. Frequently, White House newsmen have asked about stories which were on the front page of the morning paper, but Charlie shows he simply has not read the papers.

By and large, the White House gang had no great love for Roosevelt's press secretary, Steve Early. Steve was tough, excitable, and a veritable hell-on-wheels when he got mad. But nobody could deny that Early was a cracker-jack newspaperman and a whizz-bang press agent. He knew a story when he saw one, also he knew how to develop the type of news which would help his boss along. . . . Ross, on the other hand, frequently knocks down stories that members of the administration float as trial balloons to help the president, sometimes finds himself embarrassed to find out that these trial balloons were accurate. . . . Cold fact is that Ross idolizes Truman too much for their mutual good. Roosevelt was supposed to have been a much stronger man than Truman, but his aides criticized him more for his face than do Truman's advisers. What the White House brain trust doesn't realize is that Truman lacks constructive criticism well. But for some reason, perhaps because he feels insecure, his staff hesitates to give it to him.

Capital Chaff
The state and war departments are having a private pitched battle over army plans to send a large flight of B-29's on a round-the-world tour. It looks too much like saber-rattling. . . . Assistant Secretary of State W. Clayton's Texas business partner, Lamar Fleming, has made a $2,000 contribution to the Republican campaign, despite the fact that his partner is a pillar of a Democratic administration. . . . If the U. S. government—especially the army and navy—would curtail some of its own building construction, there would be enough material to build homes for G. M.'s. . . . Secretary of Commerce Averell Harriman will make his first public speeches in behalf of the Democratic party—probably in California, New York and Pennsylvania. . . . The state department is having trouble getting reservations at New York hotels for United Nations delegates—partly because of race, color and creed. . . . Former Attorney General Biddle is a good bet to be first permanent chairman of the United Nations educational, scientific and cultural organization. Chicago university president Bob Hutchins was the original candidate of Assistant Secretary of State Bill Benton for this job, but Hutchins turned thumbs down. Temporary chairman is British Julian Huxley.

Under the most favorable pre-war conditions, the Scilly Isles, 25 miles off England's southwest corner, shipped 85,000,000 individual flower blossoms a year.

Shade of Sycamore
By PERCY MARKS Author of "The Plastic Age" "A Tree Grown Straight" Etc.
© by Percy Marks: Distributed by NEA Service, Inc.
THE STORY: Gayle, daughter of a college professor, has just become engaged to handsome Bruce Bartlett, famous athlete and scion of wealth. Visiting his home and parents for the first time, she is frightened by the splendor in which they live. An elaborate ball is given and Bart is entranced with her appearance. Gayle has promised to spend some time with old Mr. Bartlett in the morning and asks the maid to waken her early so as not to keep him waiting.
X
THE next morning Gayle found Mr. Bartlett waiting for her in the sunken gardens. He was in his wheelchair sitting under a striped umbrella, a table with the bell on it at his side. Miss Wallace was seated under another umbrella perhaps twenty yards away. She smiled at Gayle as she passed, and Gayle waved a greeting in return. Without preliminary talk, she bent and kissed Mr. Bartlett. Then she stood back and looked at him. "Aren't you much better than you were yesterday? Your color's ever so much better."
"Yes, I am," he motioned to the wicker chair beside him. "Sit down. I'm glad I'm so well, because I want to talk to you, and I couldn't very well if I were having one of my bad days. I've done little but think about you since yesterday morning."
"Somehow I know they were nice thoughts," said Gayle. "I wouldn't have been thinking them if I hadn't loved you at sight." He paused and studied her gravely. "Tell me, you dislike my wealth very much, don't you?"
"Yes," Gayle answered without hesitation. "I disliked it before I ever came in contact with it, and now I dislike it more than ever."
"I thought so," he said yesterday. "The grandeur frightened you. Will you tell me why you dislike it so much?"
"Gladly. I've always wanted a life like my mother's, Mr. Bartlett. We're a very happy family, and I suppose I've wanted things to stay the same. I held Bart off for a long time on account of your money. It seemed to me it would start us where most people want to end—and I didn't see what could come in between."
"I see what you mean, of course," said Father when he was married. And he and Mother have worked hard—they've worked together—to have a home, and it means something; it means pretty nearly everything in the world."
"You don't know what you're asking, my dear," he said at last. "You have no idea at all. And that brings us to the things I planned to tell you. You've got to make up your mind to be a rich man's wife. If you're going to marry Bruce—and you must if you don't want to finish off my wretched old heart—if you marry him, you've got to be ready to accept the obligations wealth brings—yes, and the deprivations too. You can't have the satisfaction of building from the ground up the way your parents did. And this is what I really wanted to say—"

you must be fair to Bruce. "Fair to him?" she asked, confused. "Am I being unfair?"
"BRUCE, Gayle, has always had everything, and the money isn't entirely responsible. He hasn't been taught to deny himself anything. Now you want to deny him everything all at once. How would you like to be forced to make such an adjustment? It would be ten times the adjustment you would have to make if you became the mistress of Sycamore tomorrow. No, my dear, I won't make Bruce suffer for my mistakes. I admit to you I made mistakes, very bad ones. Bruce should never have been brought up to rely on wealth entirely, but that's the way he was brought up. I think he ought to have the house, and he can't maintain it without an allowance. I'll tell you this much for your comfort. Nothing will be left to him outright at my death. He will get it all eventually, but my wife is my beneficiary, and she is a very strong, healthy woman. She will probably live another twenty-five or thirty years." He smiled almost sadly. "There's going to be a war in Europe, and if we get into it, it will absorb the great fortunes like fire flaming across a prairie. You and Bruce will have a generous income, but you won't be rich. Doesn't that satisfy you?"
"It has to if I want Bart, and I do want him," she smiled at him, and her cheeks grew pink.
Miss Wallace drew near. "I'm terribly sorry, Miss Kent," she said apologetically, "but I've given Mr. Bartlett 15 minutes more than the doctor said he could have."
Gayle stood up at once. "Oh, do you think it's been bad for him?"
"Probably, but I think he's entitled to do something that's bad for him once in a while."
"There," said Mr. Bartlett, "do you see why I adore my nurse?"
"I do, indeed. I can't tell you what this talk has meant to me, Mr. Bartlett. I'll never be able to tell you."
"You don't have to. It's meant even more to me."

You can't have the satisfaction of building from the ground up the way your parents did. And this is what I really wanted to say—"

you must be fair to Bruce. "Fair to him?" she asked, confused. "Am I being unfair?"
"BRUCE, Gayle, has always had everything, and the money isn't entirely responsible. He hasn't been taught to deny himself anything. Now you want to deny him everything all at once. How would you like to be forced to make such an adjustment? It would be ten times the adjustment you would have to make if you became the mistress of Sycamore tomorrow. No, my dear, I won't make Bruce suffer for my mistakes. I admit to you I made mistakes, very bad ones. Bruce should never have been brought up to rely on wealth entirely, but that's the way he was brought up. I think he ought to have the house, and he can't maintain it without an allowance. I'll tell you this much for your comfort. Nothing will be left to him outright at my death. He will get it all eventually, but my wife is my beneficiary, and she is a very strong, healthy woman. She will probably live another twenty-five or thirty years." He smiled almost sadly. "There's going to be a war in Europe, and if we get into it, it will absorb the great fortunes like fire flaming across a prairie. You and Bruce will have a generous income, but you won't be rich. Doesn't that satisfy you?"
"It has to if I want Bart, and I do want him," she smiled at him, and her cheeks grew pink.
Miss Wallace drew near. "I'm terribly sorry, Miss Kent," she said apologetically, "but I've given Mr. Bartlett 15 minutes more than the doctor said he could have."
Gayle stood up at once. "Oh, do you think it's been bad for him?"
"Probably, but I think he's entitled to do something that's bad for him once in a while."
"There," said Mr. Bartlett, "do you see why I adore my nurse?"
"I do, indeed. I can't tell you what this talk has meant to me, Mr. Bartlett. I'll never be able to tell you."
"You don't have to. It's meant even more to me."

THE STORY: Gayle, daughter of a college professor, has just become engaged to handsome Bruce Bartlett, famous athlete and scion of wealth. Visiting his home and parents for the first time, she is frightened by the splendor in which they live. An elaborate ball is given and Bart is entranced with her appearance. Gayle has promised to spend some time with old Mr. Bartlett in the morning and asks the maid to waken her early so as not to keep him waiting.
THE next morning Gayle found Mr. Bartlett waiting for her in the sunken gardens. He was in his wheelchair sitting under a striped umbrella, a table with the bell on it at his side. Miss Wallace was seated under another umbrella perhaps twenty yards away. She smiled at Gayle as she passed, and Gayle waved a greeting in return. Without preliminary talk, she bent and kissed Mr. Bartlett. Then she stood back and looked at him. "Aren't you much better than you were yesterday? Your color's ever so much better."
"Yes, I am," he motioned to the wicker chair beside him. "Sit down. I'm glad I'm so well, because I want to talk to you, and I couldn't very well if I were having one of my bad days. I've done little but think about you since yesterday morning."
"Somehow I know they were nice thoughts," said Gayle. "I wouldn't have been thinking them if I hadn't loved you at sight." He paused and studied her gravely. "Tell me, you dislike my wealth very much, don't you?"
"Yes," Gayle answered without hesitation. "I disliked it before I ever came in contact with it, and now I dislike it more than ever."
"I thought so," he said yesterday. "The grandeur frightened you. Will you tell me why you dislike it so much?"
"Gladly. I've always wanted a life like my mother's, Mr. Bartlett. We're a very happy family, and I suppose I've wanted things to stay the same. I held Bart off for a long time on account of your money. It seemed to me it would start us where most people want to end—and I didn't see what could come in between."
"I see what you mean, of course," said Father when he was married. And he and Mother have worked hard—they've worked together—to have a home, and it means something; it means pretty nearly everything in the world."
"You don't know what you're asking, my dear," he said at last. "You have no idea at all. And that brings us to the things I planned to tell you. You've got to make up your mind to be a rich man's wife. If you're going to marry Bruce—and you must if you don't want to finish off my wretched old heart—if you marry him, you've got to be ready to accept the obligations wealth brings—yes, and the deprivations too. You can't have the satisfaction of building from the ground up the way your parents did. And this is what I really wanted to say—"

Ban Off Cattle From Mexico

Quarantine to be Lifted at 12:01
A.M. on Friday

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—(AP)—The United States will lift its quarantine against shipments of Mexican cattle at 12:01 a. m. (CST) Friday, October 18, it was learned Tuesday night.

Officials of the Department of Agriculture, which imposed the ban June 5 because of potential hoof and mouth disease conditions, said Secretary Clinton P. Anderson probably will rescind the quarantine in an order tomorrow.

Acting under a 1930 sanitary treaty with Mexico, Anderson invoked the quarantine after Mexico permitted two importations of Zebu (Brahma) bulls for breeding purposes over U. S. protest. Mexico imported the bulls from Brazil, where hoof and mouth disease is known to exist.

The move to lift restrictions against incoming animals from Mexico follows President Truman's radio address last night, in which he said investigation of cattle health conditions in Mexico indicated the border can be opened immediately.

Instruction Given
EL PASO, Tex., Oct. 15.—(AP)—Dr. John Redmond, inspector for the bureau of animal husbandry here, said he had received a telegram from the chief of the bureau of quarantine to lift the ban on importation of Mexican cattle Friday, Oct. 18. Dr. Redmond's district extends to Nogales, Ariz.

Dr. Redmond said his staff and facilities were ready to allow imports Friday. Local stock handling facilities also are prepared to handle 30,000 head of cattle in one day.

The inspector said that no cattle were waiting on the border in this area but he expected some by Monday. He said the cattle now are on ranches in the interior. Dr. Redmond's staff checks the animals for disease on the Mexican side of the border before they cross.
